

Green City Oct 29th 1854

Dear Broth Young

I hope you will bear with me in asking you another question in addition to the one I sent the 26th day The matter is this One of the Brethren from Harmony has just been in to see me and asked me what he should do as he felt that he had got into transgression his case is this After he came to Herts. Quarter he went back to the State to get a woman that was promised to him which had staid behind to settle up some business, he got the woman and before she was married to him he had connexion with her he feels that he did wrong although at the time he thought he did no wrong so long as he married her. he had had his Endowments he wishes to know what he shall do. I think he has deeply repented of the sin and says that if the Law of God requires his blood to be spilled he will. Most willingly comply with anything required that he may be saved.

Will you tell me what to say to him? in answering this it will answer many of like nature

The work of reformation in working mightily among the people and the Spirit is searching deeply their hearts and causing them to confess their sins with weeping and sorrow

Most Respectfully yours
J. C. Haigh
